There is, all the difference imaginable between the East and Fremantle, though they are but 11 miles apart, and though the people move constantly from one to the other. The one is a large population and the other an inland population, and that makes all the difference. The one is democratic and social, the other is metropolitan and conservative—the one will lead the future, the other will follow. The one will lean towards old England, the other will lean towards old America. There will be a radical awakening under the new constitution—perhaps an unhealthy excess of the franchise and higher education will be given to the masses, and they will look back into a wise use of the enlarged privileges to be granted by the Enabling Bill to which the English Government is committed. And I predict here that the future will be a more democratic one than the future will be Fremantle. It may seem something too confident to make such an assertion as this on the slight knowledge I have of the colony, but I think it is a fair one. I am sure that is, that is, he newspaper, and that the expression of opinion by leading men serve as an index to the feeling of the mass; for they must of necessity turn their sails to the political breeze by

Bacon dissent.
 The principal cause arising out of all consideration, but the principal cause, is the question of the bakers' question consists in the number of abominably bad puns cropping up out of every matter directly or indirectly connected with their trade. Whether employers or employees, their president, chairman, secretary is known as "The Master of the Rolls," they cannot send seven delegates to a meeting without having them called "The Wise Men from the East." If a man exhibit the slightest symptom of incoherence, he is forthwith likened to a "turnout," and he is called "himself" "The Master of the Rolls," he is termed a "hardbake," whilst his disagreeable neighbour is credited with being "crusty." If the heavy jokes about Ham and the bread and mustard didn't occasionally come in, an antiquarian would undoubtedly be engaged in to look and book-mach as regardless of the expense.

that the com mittee was so constituted as to be controlled by Democratic control, and the mean that in the Presidential contest of the city would be flooded with many hands of persons employed by the Fair who would be constrained by gentleness to vote the Democratic ticket, and thus possibly carry the city for the Democrats.

Senate amended the bill by adding enough Republicans to the committee to take it out of Democratic control, and this amendment has just been passed by the Democratic minority in the Lower House of the Legislature, aided by a Section of the Legislature, and the bill is now in the hands of the Legislature, and the fair is now in a possible practical advantage; and thus the matter has come to a deadlock. Probably the commercial outlook is good, but a great deal of commerce has been caused by an extraordinarily early season in the thickly-populated States along the Atlantic coast. We have now reached February 1st, a single visitation of really cold weather, which has chilled the coal men, and the dry-goods men and the furriers, and all the rest who are left under the reign of Jack Frost, and have thrown large stocks of uncolored goods on the market, so that the coal men are by no means sure that there has been a permanent change in our meteorologic policy, owing to the disappearance of the snow, and the cessation of the visitation in the west on the 1st of Lawrence River, which is several degrees from their usual course formerly. The blizzard at the close of 1889 shows an area for ar slightly in advance of the average for the preceding decade, although still considerably below that for 1885. The average for the decade 1880-1889 was 1,000,000 acres. The Department of Agriculture of the United States for the crops of 1889 places the wheat acreage at 123,859 acres, about 2 per cent above the area of 1888, and the yield at 400,560 bushels an, an average of 12.86 bushels per acre as compared with 12 bushels for the decade 1880-1889 per acre for the nine years 1880 1888. The average weight, however, is said to be less than 60 lbs., so that the ct, when reduced to commercial bushels, probably be at least 2 or 3 per cent below the average of the preceding decade.

 The wheat is not so generally well found in some localities to be by so as satisfactory as formerly, and in several States in which a few years back wheat was principal, if not the only crop of importance have come to the conclusion that raising it is unprofitable for most manufacturers of the west, and that their energies and capital. This sentiment is noticeable in Iowa, where, in the early of settlement, wheat was universally grown.
 In a few years growers had no reason to be

 It. In 1879 the area devoted to wheat had 3,048,298 acres, but from that date wheat has steadily declined in area. In 1880 it was reduced, the wheat crop all over the United States failed, and the national yield for the year fell 104 bushels per acre. The area just wheat in Iowa had even then fallen 7 per cent, but breadth sufficient to make the wheat of the United States in 1880 was not so small The full force of the bad season was etched by the Iowa farmers, the yield per acre decreasing 6.6 bushels, and the total production of the year amounted to only 18,000,000 bushels. It is, however, a very disconcerting fact that the rapidly lost. But failure the harvest was not the only thing farmers had to complain of. The chinch bug and the crops of those who still remained in the wheat crops that year, but the crops that of the young corn in its first growth.

 We are told, "caused an additional prejudice against wheat as a staple crop." The fact is not surprising, then, that while the area of Iowa has been advancing in population, the number of farms has grown, and the area of wheat has greatly increased, there has been a steady decline in the breadth of Iowa wheat land. The fall in the acreage of wheat in Iowa is almost one-half in 50 years, the area under wheat in 1889 being only 1,044,558 acres. A comparison of the acreage under wheat in 1888 with the present is just to hand for the past year shows a general tendency for wheat cultivation in the Western States to be on the decline. While the seeds of wheat-growing are still the same and finding it necessary to pay more attention to the culture of crops and the preservation of the fertility of the soil. In 30 States the area under wheat has decreased in the aggregate since 1868, with the exception of Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Nebraska, the which remain the same. It would seem that the area devoted to wheat be increased in the near future during the next ten years a yield would barely suffice for the domestic requirements of the United States, and the surplus for export would be small. Wheat-production is not, and probably will not again become, as profitable as it was in 1881, and although the area under wheat will not likely slowly increase, a substantial in the price of wheat will be necessary before any advance can be reasonably anticipated.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

In view of the extraordinary display of courage and endurance by Miss Lacy in the late disasters on the north coast of Queensland, following on the display by Beach and his party in the same region, the display of courage and physical courage, the qualities, is there anything in the climate or surges of Australia which would lead us to expect the development of this kind of courage in our people elsewhere by the race to which we belong? This has been noted by almost everyone that has been more addicted to outdoor athletic sports than the people of the rest of the world. It is taken by our cricketers and by the small number of young fellows whom we send home to English universities in the winter months, and in the same way, and now one of our Australians has placed on record a few of physical endurance which will probably remain unbroken for as long as the world as far as the matter of endurance is concerned. It is in past history. Whence comes this magnificent physical development of the race, and it is accounted for by a parallel mental development. The latter is extremely interesting.

I am, Sir,
W. S. ABBOTT.

I beg to draw attention to what, I think, is a mistake on the part of the Government, with reference to the canal which is under construction from the Parana River to Marion-street, at Leichhardt. I think instead of having the wharf at Marion-street carry the canal to the Batts Bridge, Parramatta, by doing it would be more central, and would benefit Burwood, Enfield, and Leichhardt, &c., and the benefits would more than recoup for a outlay.

of the event. She remained for thirty hours in the water, without even a life-line support and a descent from the surface of the water. This is probably unprecedented. We have heard of professional swimmers crossing the Channel, attended by boats from which they were supplied with beef tea, brandy, or other stimulants from time to time. But this young lady was left entirely to her own resources, and without the moral support the presence of such aids could give. She had no fear of sharks, we are told; but in a tropical sea notoriously swarming with these voracious creatures, the fact does the more credit to this young girl's steady nerve. Through the dense forest, and under the sign and under the scorching sun by day, she appears to have preserved the same imperishable good heart, and the whole story is good deal from time to time, and not always in our favour. At one time it was quite a common charge that the Australian sons and daughters of English parents had none of the vigorous stamina of those, like Harry of Monmouth's yeoman, "whose limbs were made in England." The native-born were sligher and taller, and it was said that this slighness and want of substance were not confined to the physical side. The theory was that the sudden removal of the rearing from the tropics to the softer climate of Australia deteriorated the type, and the argument was backed up by the experiences of Englishmen in the East and West Indies. The warmer climate of India, it is well known, is particularly trying to English ladies and children; so much so that Army officers there have almost always been in the habit of sending their wives and daughters home after a few years. Of course, it will not be contended that the inhabitants of warm zones will prove, as a rule, quite so energetic or physically so hardy, if left to themselves, as those who have to live under ill-climate. The types of nationality in Europe alone sufficiently demonstrate that. The Greek and lying in the sun in the society of a companion, than of working in coal-mines or salt-mines, or going to sea before the mast like the Danes and Swedes and English. The pioneer work of new countries like the south-western states of America and our own colonies is done by the immigrated labour of the northern countries of Europe, while that of the south confines its energies chiefly to fruit-selling or playing in our streets upon exasperating musical instruments. The theory against us in the past has sometimes been that we will show more of the characteristics of our southern Europe than of the North in our national types of the future. We have been told that the Australian climate says, "Be idle, and starve," and that the physique, which in the long run must prove fatal to anything like continuity of physical or mental effort.

There is just about the usual grain of truth in all this, it may be admitted; and perhaps we might be justified in going so far as to say that if the Australian race were of a type that would be likely to "let itself go," the course of generations might eventually issue in some such deterioration as old-fashioned people used to predict for us. But in the meantime there is not much prospect of that kind of thing while we grow Australian girls who can give such an exceedingly good account of themselves as Miss LACT, or while we produce the successive champions of our own athletes that Australia is continually throwing out. Experience seems to show that as the imported types acclimatise the natives here, their sons and daughters lose that weakness that characterised the early generations of the Australian-born. The race is evidently adapting itself to the conditions is potent enough to withstand the effects of climate. At the same time it is to be observed that the arguments against the Australian type founded on the experiences of the British race in India are very insufficiently based. The climate of Australasia except on the coast is not so hot as India, although the temperature is high, is calculated to harden the endurance of both man and beast. The bushman and the bush horse are alike instances of what we mean. Both man and horse alike can travel and endure almost without end, with very little more than a pipeful of Explorers will show that the nightingale conditions exist only three times the far north-west, even from only the type of physical endurance Australian life has to show in the shape of bullock-punchers, boundary-riders, and stockmen from the back blocks are enough to discount any misgivings that may be advanced on the subject of racial deterioration.

The fact is that the climatic conditions of Australia are not so deleterious as they have been described to be, while on the contrary, the climate is so good during the summer months that it is a great advantage to have some of the great bridges to show, though their largest spans are in suspension bridges, notably those of Niagara and Brooklyn. But as an engineering feat they have at present nothing to equal the Forth Bridge. It has been suggested in an American journal that an opportunity will be offered of outdoing the Scotch structure by building a cantilever bridge over the Hudson, and so connecting the peninsula on which New York stands with the mainland to the east.

At present the railway traffic is carried across, and a bridge to enable goods and passengers to be run right into the city would certainly be a great advantage. It is quite possible, therefore, that the Forth among the Australian native-born to withstand any enervating influences that may exist. We are an old country people, and we love the open air. So long as we keep there sufficiently, we find ourselves quite at home in our Australian climate, and the mistake is to follow too closely the English habits of domestic and social life that would lead us to keep to the fireside, or at least indoors, as we might in the old English homes. As time goes on we shall probably learn to move still more in the open air—to dine and live as well as play there. The future type of the race depends very largely on the direction the women of the country give it, and the duty of adaptation is one that is peculiarly theirs. That is the

So far as this colony is concerned, we are not likely at present to want any greater engineering feat than the bridge over the Hawkesbury, the one that most demands attention being a bridge over Sydney Harbour to the West-Gore. Ours is not a country distinguished for great rivers, but there is plenty of room for our engineers to show economy and efficiency in crossing such rivers as we have, liable as many of them are to great and sudden floods. Our young engineers have been a field before them.

TERRIBLE CRIME IN RUSSIA.

A WOMAN MURDERED BY NIHILISTS.

[BY CABLE.]
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, MARCH 7.

A horrible murder has been committed in Moscow by Nihilists.

From the particulars to hand it appears that a parcel was delivered at the office of the Governor of Moscow containing woman's head, and also a letter stating that this was the first exploit, and that the perpetrators of the deed would soon utter "Jack the Ripper." The remainder of the body of the unfortunate woman was found in two sacks.

Several persons have been arrested in complicity in the murder.

It is generally believed that the victim of the horrible deed had been first outraged and then murdered for having betrayed the Nihilists.

LANDSLIP ON THE YARRA.

(BY TELEGRAPH.)
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.)

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

Last evening a landslide occurred at the Australian Wharf, about midway between the gas-works and the entrance to the shipping company's wharf. The cause of the landslide was the failure of the timber trestle which supported the wharf. An engine of about 60 tons weight came to the wharf to draw away coal-laden trucks for Spencer street, when the weight of the engine caused the beams which stay the wharf to break; the wharf fell several feet outward, and causing a landslide which is likely to prove of some inconvenience.

ADELAIDE, FRIDAY.

A conference between the directors of the Wallaroo mines and the representatives of the disaffected miners was held at the company's offices, Adelaide, this afternoon. After the delegates had stated their grievances about Harvey's shaft, Sir William Mitchell, chairman of the directors, explained that the men had been prejudicial in endeavouring to throw the responsibility for their own shoulders on to the directors. He advised the men to return to work. The board promised to give the matter further consideration at their meeting on Monday, but if they did decide to work Harvey's engine again, it would only be in accordance with the rules of the A.M.A.

TO BE SENT TO SYDNEY FOR TRIAL.

Inspector Casey, under instructions from the Police Department, applied to the Bench to remand the aboriginal Tommy Ryan, charged with robbing a mail coach, to Sydney, on the ground that Constable Bradley, his wife, and C. Ryan, the only evidence against the accused, are at present in Sydney, the former being an inmate of one of the hospitals, and could not leave Greater Melbourne. It was stated that as the accused was an accused prisoner, he could not be placed in gaol until committed, and it took two of the police to prevent his escape. The Bench granted the remand, but the Bench granted the application, and the accused will be sent to Sydney by to-morrow's steamer.

THE FATAL ACCIDENT AT THE OAKY PARK COLLIERY.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.)

LITHGOW, FRIDAY.

The lament on the body of the unfortunate man William Cameron, who was killed by a falling timber at the Oaky Park Colliery on Tuesday, was resumed yesterday morning at the Court-house. Henry Oakes deposed that he and James Palmer had the contract for sinking the air-shaft in connection with the Oaky Park Colliery. There were also employed in addition to the deceased, Thomas Maclean, Samuel Morris, and James Palmer. The deceased with Palmer and Morris were drilling at the bottom of the shaft about 160 ft. deep, he (Oakes) banking off; it was his duty to look on the engine-driver to haul up; also when the bucket was brought to the surface. The bucket was hoisted by a rope which was attached to the top of the shaft. His duty would then be to unhook the full bucket, take it away, empty it, and hook it on again, signal the engine-driver to haul up, and then signal the bucket to lower. On the morning of the 4th, the bucket was hoisted, and the engine-driver, as usual, signalled the engine-driver to lower the bucket, which he did. He did not see it come into contact with anything while hanging, but he heard the bucket strike the bottom of the shaft, and the engine-driver, Maclean, told him the bucket had hit. The engine-driver then signalled the bucket to lower, and the bucket came down. The bucket was hoisted, and the engine-driver, as usual, signalled the engine-driver to lower the bucket, which he did. He did not see it come into contact with anything while hanging, but he heard the bucket strike the bottom of the shaft, and the engine-driver, Maclean, told him the bucket had hit. THE WEATHER.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.)

CONTINUATION OF COASTAL RAIDS.

February's unsettled weather has shown no disposition to be favourably influenced by the fact of the change in the name of the month. The same storming showers continue to fall, Sydney sharing pretty liberally. In the 24 hours ending yesterday morning at 9 o'clock close upon another half-inch was added to the rainfall in the metropolis, and yesterday some smart showers fell. About 1 p.m. the rain came down pretty freely about half an inch. The prevailing winds are east to south-east, fresh at times, then dying away to a calm. Last night, at about midnight, it was tending more to the N.E., with an overcast sky. There is some bad weather in the offing judging by the reports of the state of the sea along the coast. At nearly all the stations it was last night rough, and in instances very heavy, though there has been no rain to speak of. The temperature was the rainfall to be quite a coastal one, extending to the high lands in the eastern districts. At 3 p.m. it was showery at Newcastle, Sydney, Armidale, Grafton, Byron Bay, Casino, Grafton, Glen Innes, Grafton, Jervis Bay, Murrumbidgee, Port Macquarie, Quinalba, Raymond Terrace, Seal Rocks, Sawyers River, Tenterden, and at Tenterden. As will be seen from our correspondents' telegrams submitted, some heavy rain fell in the northern districts, and the rainfall was not only heavy, but it was accompanied by a heavy rain, and it was accompanied by a heavy rain, and it was accompanied by a heavy rain.
